PASSAGE A

Read the article below about well-being and do Task 3.

TASK 3 (5x3=15 marks)

Match the paragraphs (1 - 6) to the headings (A - G).

One has been done for you as an example. There is ONE extra heading that you DO NOT need to use.

Paragraph Headings

A. ACHIEVEMENT

E. BE INVOLVED AND COMMITTED

B. POSITIVE EMOTIONS

F. MEANING

C. PERSONALISE IT

G. RELATIONSHIPS

D. EAT SENSIBLY

The Concept of Well-being

We all struggle for happiness and well-being. But what does well-being really mean?

The concept of well-being described below is developed by Martin Seligman, an American psychologist, who has been a pioneer in the study of happiness and positive psychology.

Some simple pleasures include eating food or watching TV. The reasons we feel satisfied and fulfilled are subjective in the sense that we like different things - though some pleasures are common (or, at least, very close to being so). Positive feelings are easy to observe and measure as there is an increase in activity in certain areas in the brain.

2.

You probably know the feeling of being engaged in challenging activities where you forget everything that's going on around you. Such a state of total absorption is also known as "flow" state. When we are in this state our abilities are often stretched to the maximum creating the feeling that we are making the most of our potential.

3.

This aspect is about social interaction and having love and affection in your life through friends, family, and romantic partners. Well-being of this type is characterized by the fact that your own well-being is dependent on the well-being of others and the experiences and feelings you share and enjoy together.

4. F. MEANING

Playing a challenging computer game (being involved and committed) with good friends (relationships) while eating chips and drinking coke (positive emotions) can be awesome. But most people need something more to be truly fulfilled. Some kind of higher purpose that goes beyond the self. Something that makes sense on a higher level.

5.

This aspect is about accomplishment and success - competing and winning in some objective way where victory, or something similar, can be easily observed. Often - but not always - it includes some kind of social recognition of what has been achieved.

6.

We all define happiness in different ways. When you know what happiness means to you, you'll have an easier time finding it. So explore happiness - what it means, what it looks like, and what it feels like - to more easily create it.

PASSAGE B

Read the following article and do Task 4 below.

Amelia Earhart

Amelia Earhart was an American aviator, author and women's rights activist. She was the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic. Her disappearance in 1937 during an attempt to fly around the world is a mystery that continues to interest people worldwide.

Amelia Mary Earhart was born in Atchison, Kansas, on July 4, 1897. In December 1920, Earhart attended an air show in Long Beach. She took a short plane ride and that 10-minute flight changed her life. Just six months after she began flying lessons, in 1921, she purchased her first plane, a bright yellow, second-hand biplane that she named 'The Canary'. She soon achieved the world altitude record for women pilots in October 1922. In 1924, however, she sold 'The Canary' due to financial problems.

In April 1928, Earhart received an unexpected phone call asking if she would like to be the first woman to fly across the Atlantic. Earhart immediately accepted the offer. She was listed as a co-pilot, but eventually was not allowed to fly.

For some time, Earhart worked on plans to make a solo flight across the Atlantic. She would be the first woman and second solo person to make the flight. On June 1, 1937, Earhart and her navigator, Noonan, departed from Miami. They began the 29,000-mile journey heading east. After 29 days of flight, they touched down in Lae, New Guinea. The remaining 7,000 miles would be done over the Pacific.

On July 2, 1937, Earhart and Noonan took off from Lae to complete the flight around the world. They encountered problems with cloudy skies and rain showers early on. Some witnesses reported that the radio antenna may have been damaged, and other experts suggested that their maps may have been inaccurate.

Amelia was supposed to land on tiny Howland Island for fuel. She couldn't find it and never made it. As they neared Howland Island, they were unable to make sufficient connection or to land on the island. Earhart's last communication was at 8:43 a.m.: "We are running north and south."

Though a rescue attempt began immediately and the search continued for weeks, nothing was found. On Jan. 5, 1939, Earhart was declared legally dead.

PASSAGE C: Summary

Read the passage below about a weird sport and do Task 5.

TASK 5 (10 marks)

Write a summary of the passage to be uploaded on your school website.

Use 60-80 words.

'Wife-carrying'

'Wife-carrying' is a sport in which male competitors race while each carrying a female teammate. The objective is for the male to carry the female through a special obstacle track in the fastest time.

The sport originated in Finland, and was most likely inspired by two historical tales. A 19th century legend has it that men stole wives from neighbouring villages. In a second tale, an outlaw named Rosvo-Ronkainen made potential soldiers prove themselves in a race where they carried heavy sacks. Put the two tales together, and what do you get? 'Wife-carrying races'.

Several types of carrying may be practised: piggyback (on the back or shoulders), fireman's carry (over the shoulder), or Estonian-style (the wife hangs upside-down with her legs around the husband's shoulders, holding onto his waist).

The sport is now practised around the world and has a category in the Guinness Book of Records. Major wife-carrying competitions, though, are held in Sonkajärvi, Finland, where the prize is the wife's weight in beer. Many North American Champions go on to compete in the Finnish World Championship.

By Elias Hazou

NETHER the banks nor the government were aware of the extent to which the Greek bailout would damage Cyprus and "could not and did not take any measures" through negotiations to limit the consequences, former Finance Minister Vasos Shiarly said yesterday.

Shiarly was testifying before the committee of inquiry that is probing the circumstances leading up to the "bail-in" of Cyprus' two largest banks where he also spoke of the previous administration's track record of deficit spending, saying that while expenditure grew by approximately €1bn a year, revenues were consistently dropping.

During the course of 2012, Shiarly said, he had alerted former President Demetris Christofias to this; the latter assured him his government would take measures to bring the deficit down to below 3 per cent of GDP as per the European Commission's demands.

When it came to the haircut on bank deposits, Shiarly also said it was never put on the table while he was in office. "What was discussed was a haircut on the banks' securities, an issue on which we raised objections," he said.

Only once did the troika brooch the subject of a haircut, he said, in December 2012, but this happened during the course of an informal meeting. Subsequently, the troika team itself withdrew the idea, deeming it potentially disastrous for the Cypriot economy, said Shiarly.

But documents in the public domain appear to refute Shiarly.

The first memorandum concluded with the troika (November 2012) contains an oblique yet unmistakable reference to a "haircut of depositors."

Paragraph 1.19 of the MoU states: "The authorities will introduce legislation establishing a comprehensive framework for the recovery and resolution of credit institutions, drawing inter alia on the relevant proposal of the European Commission."

The RC proposal (dated June 4, 2012) cited clearly refers to "bail-in" as a method of recapitalising stricken lenders, and was the scenario used in March in dealing with the two largest Cypriot banks.

Moreover, the same paragraph goes on to say: "The framework will be subject to consultation with the ECU, the ECB and the IMF and will enter into force by (end-January 2013). The Central Bank of Cyprus will become the single resolution authority for banks and cooperative credit institutions."

"The new resolution legal
